

Capability Support Wheel

Defining capability development

Capability development is generally defined as developing the knowledge, skills, instincts, abilities and processes required to operate effectively and carry out a task well.

Strengthening capability tends to focus on organisational development, and is key to creating enabling conditions for organisations and grantee groups to deliver impact for communities.

Areas of capability development support

In this document, capability development resources are categorised into six broad areas that together encompass the wide scope of business or organisational development activities that grow capability.

These areas of activity are:

- Vision, mission and strategy
- Governance and leadership
- Strategic relationships
- Internal operations and management
- Service delivery and impact
- Resource development

Te Tiriti o Waitangi and climate action are key considerations for all capability-building work in Aotearoa New Zealand. Therefore, while the body of the wheel contains the six overarching areas above, te Tiriti o Waitangi and climate action are foundational elements that run across all areas of capability development. Therefore, they are represented as core structural components of the capability wheel - an inner sphere that cuts through and across the six areas, and an outer rim encircling the wheel.

Brief descriptors of these seven areas in which organisations and grantee groups can access capability development are provided below.

Te Tiriti o Waitangi

In Aotearoa New Zealand, organisations must consider and reflect te Tiriti o Waitangi.

Acknowledging and honouring the principles of partnership, participation, and protection is crucial for building authentic relationships with Māori communities and integrating indigenous perspectives into organisational strategies and practices. Te Tiriti o Waitangi is unique to Aotearoa New Zealand, embracing these special principles fosters cultural competency, equity, and inclusion, driving more meaningful and sustainable outcomes for all stakeholders.

Climate Action

Climate Action is inextricably linked to all areas of Capability Development. While the wheel consists of six overarching areas where organisations' and grantee groups can access capability development support, Climate Action sits at the hub of the wheel not because it's more important but because it's integral to all aspects of our organisations'. Climate Change is a driver of Climate Action and Climate capability development removes the artificial separation between climate and business as usual (BAU). Climate action also serves as a halo encircling our wheel. It is a foundational and cross-cutting theme across all areas of capability development. Brief descriptors of these seven areas of capability development are provided below.

Vision, Mission, and Strategy

This area focuses on defining the organisation's purpose, goals, and long-term direction. It involves articulating a compelling vision, mission statement, and strategic objectives that guide decision-making and resource allocation to maximise impact and sustainability.

Governance and Leadership

Governance and leadership address the structures, processes, and practices that facilitate effective oversight, decision-making, and accountability within the organisation. Strong governance ensures ethical conduct, transparency, and compliance with legal and regulatory requirements, while effective leadership inspires, motivates, and empowers stakeholders to achieve the organisation's mission.

Strategic Relationships

Strategic relationships encompass cultivating partnerships, alliances, and networks with stakeholders such as funders, collaborators, community members, and policymakers. Building and nurturing these relationships is essential for resource mobilisation, knowledge sharing, advocacy, and collective action to address complex social challenges.

Internal Operations and Management

This area focuses on optimising the organisation's internal systems, processes, and workflows to enhance efficiency, effectiveness, and organisational resilience. This includes areas such as human resource management, financial administration, technology infrastructure, and risk management practices.

Service Delivery and Impact

Focuses on designing, implementing, and evaluating programs or interventions that address the needs of the target population and achieve measurable outcomes. This includes ensuring quality service delivery, monitoring progress, collecting data for performance measurement, and assessing the organisation's overall impact on communities or beneficiaries.

Resource Development

Resource development encompasses strategies and activities aimed at securing financial, human, and other resources necessary to sustain and expand the organisation's operations and programs. This includes fundraising, donor cultivation, diversifying revenue streams, volunteer recruitment, and in-kind support partnerships.

Modes of capability development

Across these categories of support, resources have been organised in three categories, according to the mode of access and the degree to which support is tailored to the needs of organisations.

These are as follows:

- Universal support is generic resources, generally freely available online including by way of toolkits, guides, or webinars.
- Targeted support is more customised to particular groups or contexts and generally takes the form of professional development training.
- Tailored support encompasses bespoke, often one-on-one services designed to meet the specific needs of individuals or organisations. This includes support from consultants, such as CSI's associate network, coaching, and mentoring.

Vision, Mission, and Strategy

This area focuses on defining the organisation's purpose, goals, and long-term direction. It involves articulating a compelling vision, mission statement, and strategic objectives that guide decision-making and resource allocation to maximise impact and sustainability.

Capability support resources here are organised across five key categories:

- Te Tiriti o Waitangi
